Kids' bedrooms in Paris

Filled with tranquillity or a vibrant energy, tidy like a museum or happily topsy-turvy, a vast space or the size of a doll's house - children's bedrooms have one point in common: tenderness. Each bedroom reveals the parent's desire to express their love for their child. A child's room is a space in which dreams come to life, an environment in which parents express their creativity without bounds. And perhaps a room in which a parent's unconscious nostalgic playground comes to life?

Childrens rooms "London"

London is so large that local areas are like small villages, each with different and specific styles. Within one day you can stroll in wonderful countryside in the morning, amongst the squirrels and deer, then walk down old paved streets resembling scenes from a Dickens novel, and finally find yourself in the heart of India in the evening. Hence, each child's bedroom corresponds to a unique and personal style, inspired by the surrounding area, the origin of the house and the traditions of its dwellers.

Stockholm's Apartments

Stockholm, the capital of Sweden, is renowned for the purity and rigor of its design. However, the polished image this conjures up is slowing fading away... Innovative and creative Swedes, full of the colour of life, prefer to explore flea markets or customise objects in their home, rather than hit the shops on a Saturday. 'Recycling' and 'second-hand' are the words that define this generation. Charm and poetry replace the geometric lines of modern design.
